ALOHA!

Welcome to the website of the Office of Information Practices (OIP), whose mission is "ensuring open government while protecting individual privacy."

OIP administers two laws to promote open and transparent government in Hawai'i:

1. the Uniform Information Practices Act \(UIPA\), HRS Chapter 92F, which requires open access to government records, and
2. the Sunshine Law, part I of HRS Chapter 92, which requires open public meetings.

Both laws are intended to open up governmental processes to public scrutiny and participation by requiring government business to be conducted as transparently as possible, while balancing personal privacy rights guaranteed under the Hawaii State Constitution.

OIP provides uniform interpretation, advice, and training on these laws to nearly all of Hawaii's state and county agencies and boards.
